Legislature Meets In Joint Session

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 15 P - Gov. Cecil Underwood told legislators today of the reforms he plans to put into effect and invited ing a non-partisan attitude in solving the problems of state government.

Addressing a joint session of the Legislature in the House chamber. where he served for 12 years, the newly inaugurated governor said:

"I urgently recommend that partisanship be put aside and that al' efforts be concentrated upon the common good. Our people have frequently put aside partisanship in times past, and it is my conviction that they demand that this be done at this time.'

Underwood spoke before packed galleries. It was the occasion for the first live telecast ever made of a session of the West Virginia Legislature.

Proposed reforms outlined by Underwood included none he had not mentioned before, either in his inaugural address yesterday or in earlier speeches. He said:

"The prime aim of this administration will be to give good government to the people of West Virginia. Many reforms in state government are long overdue. Many such reforms can be put into effect by the governor under author laws. Others will require legisla

Are Communists Going Capitalistic?

Shades of Lenin and Marx, is the Communist world going capitalistic? Despite the Kremlin propagandists' ravings of the inequities of free competition systems, the Soviet Union for some time has been doing her best to undersell the western nations in the trade markets of the South America has been the prime target of Soviet trade infiltration in recent years, with the undermining of American influence in this hemisphere the ultimate Russian design. American exporters and manufacturers with branch offices in South America are becoming increasingly concerned at the prospect of cheaply produced Russian products receiving a warm reception in the money-short nations south of the U.S. border.

Trade competition is only one maneuver being used by the Reds'to further expand their peculiar political system. "Incentive" plans for productive workers is another anti-Marx system for increasing lagging production quotas. Russia has been using awards, decorations, better housing facilities and money as bait to arouse a disinterested production force.

Communist China has been following her parent in the incentive system, while placing much emphasis on women workers. The women of Red China, having recently acquired an equal status with the males, seem bent on demonstrating their superiority in workload capacity and the government is only too eager to help with incentive plans.

Russia, Red China and the satellite states of both, have not resorted to competitive enterprise measures willingly. It has become all too apparent to government officials that the lack of incentive in socialist philosophies has resulted in the Communist world lagging far behind average industrial output. It is, in effect, an admittance of failure of the "worker's millennium.'

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Do You Want A Pension?

A young lady, Donna, from Detroit writes me as follows: "Dear George Sokolsky

"Our class is studying different kinds of careers. I ing one of the last meetings. At

I'm very interested in newspaper work. I was wondering if you could give me an idea of what to take to prepare for it. What are some of the disadvantages and how does your pension work . .

I do not know how my pension works because I do not have any. If I worked for a pension, I would get a job that requires no initiative, no ingenuity, no risk. Journalism in any form is a bad profession for those whose ambition it is to work about 20 years, get a pension, and then wonder what to do with themselves. It is a good profession for the living, not for those who wait for death.

Most of those who go in for newspaper work know that they are moving into a profession that does not bring enormous financial rewards. As a matter of fact, because the Canadians push the price of newsprint beyond all reason, some newspapers go out of existence or amalgamate with others or cut their costs. Or there were those magazines like "American," "Woman's Home Companion," "Collier's" which were shut down altogether. That is a hazard of the profession. Very ' few newspapers have pension systems and most young men or women who go into this work have a romantic yearning for this particular form of self-expression, just as composers or playwrights starve for years until they attain recognition, if

I think, Donna, that you had better make up your mind whether you are interested in newspaper work or in a pension. If it is a pension that you seek, then the Civil Service is the best place to go. On a government job, one can get along well doing a minimum of work, never getting in anybody's way, offending no superior, keeping one's nose clean, as the phrase is, and if one does not die before the time for retirement comes, then there is the pension to take care of

In my profession, most men and women work until they die which is as it should be. Sometimes one is a little more skillful and imaginative and he lands a better position than the next fellow. Or one, by very hard work, becomes a specialist in a particular field. Such men and women work around the clock, read voluminously, travel the world, and know their subject. This is particularly true of the various science reporters, as an example.

Many reporters nowadays must know several foreign languages if they are to get on with their jobs. They are expected to know how to get on in the countries to which they are assigned. When I first came to China in 1918, few American correspondents could speak and read Chinese, although the French and German correspondents seemed to have prepared themselves for the assignment.

Excluding a category known as "peephole columnists," those who earn a living by recording the foibles of unimportant people, usually erring women and lecherous men, those wh engage in journalism need to study history, philosophy, psychology, literature and languages. This gives a journalism a good start. Economics helps, if one can find a place where it is taught properly which is very difficult these days because so many economists have come under the influence of John Maynard Keynes, which leads them astray. But as money and taxes are among the most important problems of the day, a working knowledge of economics is of value.

Of course, Donna, you may go in for sports and memorize the names of all the great horses and pitchers, like they do on the $64,000 television shows. but I should like to tell you that sports writers often end up in other fields. Such men as Heywood Broun. John Reed, Westbrook Pegler, Bob Considine, Paul Gallico and many others started as sports writers and landed all over the lot. And Bill Corum received the same early training that I did in the same school. One can know about Alexander and Aristotle and about horses and baseball. But whatever it is, it is not a pension that can be made a goal of life. A pension can be a limitation on ambition.

Kearns found that 60 per cent of the escapees wanted to come to the U.S. Yet there was no American official on the scene to greet them and keep hopes up, though other countries had responded by rushing consular persennel from Vienna to border camps. Reason was insufficient staff at the U.S. Embassy.

Switzerland called off all dances out of respect for the Hungarian freedom fighters, according to Kearns. Some countries, including France, rushed buses to the Hungarian border, then announced: "All refugees who want to go to France, climb aboard.' By contrast, the 60 per cent

In what position has a young woman the best chance of meeting and marrying a millionaire? Our Horses and Women experts maintain it is that of a stewardess on a transatlantic plane. A recent substantiation of this claim is the case of 27-year-old airline stewardess, Jane Murchison, who met 46-year-old Richard Baird on a transatlantic flight and married him shortly after. Mr Baird is a millionaire owner of diamond and gold mines in South Africa. Jane now has much diamond jewelry, plenty of mink coats and stoles, a Rolls-Royce automobile and three homes A country home near Newmarket, England, a luxury flat in London and a farm in South Africa.
